“Greening” the Economy

Good Food and Fun at an “Eco-Eatery”
Leah Taylor

Welcome to Habana Outpost, an “eco-eatery” in Fort Greene, Brooklyn.

Enjoy your frozen mojitos, grilled corn, Cuban sandwiches, and quesadillas at a picnic table.

Couldn’t eat all your food? Don’t throw it away. Compost it, and it will be used later as a rich fertilizer.

This solar “chandelier” uses light from the sun.
Order a blended drink and watch an employee pedal the stationary bike to power the mixer—or, climb on yourself and get a $1 discount.

Rainwater is used for cleaning and to power a fountain.

Bring your kids to the Kids Corner, which offers hands-on workshops.

Solar panels on the roof of Habana Outpost provide energy.

Leah Taylor lives in Fort Greene, Brooklyn and is a Managing Editor for Flavorpill NYC. Photos thanks to <www.ecoeatery.com>.