New Rules at the Blow Dry Bar

Raegan Walker

BEFORE YOU READ:

1. What is a Blow Dry Bar? What do you think the safety issues at a Blow Dry Bar might be?

2. Be on the lookout for these vocabulary words (in bold italics) as you read: inevitable, sanitize, imperative, dilute, prior, mandatory, transmission. Can you tell the meaning from the context?

3. Also, as you read, be on the lookout for these adverbs (in bold italics and underlined): however, nevertheless, additionally, although.

Back to Work during the Pandemic

Working as a receptionist at a hair salon during the pandemic has added extra steps to my daily job responsibilities. It means more work, but these procedures allow me to feel more comfortable working despite the risk.

I am a single mother of three, so going back to work was inevitable. I need the income! And my employer gave a bonus to the workers who agreed to come back as soon as the shop reopened after quarantine.

New Responsibilities

We had a lot of new procedures for managing the shop during the pandemic. To reduce my risk of getting Covid, I not only wear a mask but also a face shield for additional protection. I keep my work area sanitized, and I sanitize my own hands after touching a new surface.

When clients come to the door, I check temperatures, ensure clients have a mask on, and give sanitizer to everyone before they come inside. Mostly, our clients are relieved that we do it. However, occasionally, clients are visibly annoyed while I complete these imperative tasks, especially the ladies who come more frequently. Nevertheless, I happily do these procedures to help ensure the safety of everyone.

We also do extra sanitizing after every client. From the door to the chairs to the counters, everything gets cleaned with a Barbicide sanitation solution. Barbicide is a well-known cleaning product in salons and barbershops. If you dilute it properly, it is totally safe for cleaning.

Additionally, at the end of every shift I now make lengthy confirmation calls to the clients scheduled for the following day. Prior to the pandemic, we made confirmation calls but now, in addition to confirming the appointment, we must give clients a Covid questionnaire. This checks that they have not been exposed to the virus prior to their appointments and are our blow dry bar's new rules. For example, masks are mandatory, and you can't consume food or drinks anymore.

Also, to cut down on virus transmission, we no longer accept cash. Fortunately, most returning clients remember the new procedures after the first or second visit, so I can shorten my script a little.

Although the pandemic has added to my daily workload, I complete each task with pleasure. I know I am contributing to everyone's safety. I even feel many of these practices should be made permanent for the health benefit of all. It is more important now than ever to think about others as much as yourself. Only together can we stop the spread of the Covid-19 virus.

This Manufacturer Safety Data Sheet (MSDS) is a 6-page document with details about how to use Barbicide safely. You can find the whole document here: https://barbicide.com/ wp-content/uploads/2020/01/Barbicide-TB- SDS-05.01.20192.pdf.

NOTE: This is a complex document with difficult words. Yet it is a common document on many job sites and an important one to understand. What strategies can you use to approach this hard document?

3. Revisit the words in bold underline. These adverbs act as transition words. They signal something about what you are about to read. What do they signal? Try creating your own sentences using these words.
